Miss Florence Richardson and her 160-year-old Amati violin.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York.—The thirty-year-sleep of a one-hundred-and-sixty-year-old Amati violin has been broken. The valuable, born in 1763, had remained untouched in the home of a wealthy and elderly broker here for more than many years. Its slumbers undisturbed.

One day the broker stopped at the Casino in Central Park. He heard the Studio Girls' orchestra was struck by the playing and the beauty of Florence Richardson, violinist.

The instrument is valued at $10,000. He remembered his prize tidie,000.

WITH THE FARMERS

Farm Bureau Official Information

Nordman States His Position on Cooperative Work

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]
Madison.—Edward Nordman, commissioner of markets, has issued a statement denying circulated reports that he is opposed to the co-operative movement.

"Co-operation and organization are indispensable to the improvement of conditions in agriculture," according to the statement. "The very nature of agricultural production requires organization and combination of effort in marketing. Unlike other industries where workmen are concentrated in one place, farmers are scattered over large areas and they live at a distance, often quite a considerable one, from each other. Under such conditions they cannot market their products to the best advantage unless they co-operate, pool their products and ship them to market in large quantities."

"Co-operation is of inestimable value to the improvement of business methods in farming. The individual farmer does not have much time to look after the marketing side of his enterprise. He has very little spare time to locate the best places to market his products or to buy his supplies. But, working on the basis of co-operation with other farmers, he is in a position to engage the services of a competent manager and make him responsible to the co-operative association. The manager keeps in touch with the state of the market which enables him to find the best markets for the products handled by the association."

"Besides reducing costs through large scale marketing, co-operation enables farmers to find facilities for the financing of marketing operations and in general it leads towards the elimination of waste, inefficiency and duplication of services which characterize the present marketing system. Besides the advantages enumerated above, co-operation places farmers in a position to deal on equal terms with other business interests. It has, at the same time, a great educational advantage in that it brings farmers together, thus facilitating exchange of ideas and discussions of problems which are of vital interest to them."

Reduction Made. in Freight Rates on Brick and Sand

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

Madison.—An order effecting a considerable reduction in freight rates on common brick, lime brick and concrete products has been issued by the railroad commission.

The order makes two distinct schedules of rates, one for common brick, lime brick and concrete products, and the other, considerably higher, for face, fire and paving brick and other clay products. Practically all brick and concrete products moving locally within the state will be affected.

The double schedule is said to be a new departure as regards brick rates in the state, all the products named formerly taking the same rates. The double schedule is designed to keep Wisconsin rates competitive with interstate rates, the Interstate Commerce Commission having issued an order some time ago requiring carriers to make a 20 per cent difference between the interstate rates for common brick and those for higher grades of brick and other clay products.

The bulk of the traffic affected by the new order is common brick and concrete products. For a distance of 20 miles the rate will be reduced from 55 cents to 54 cents; for 55 miles from 7 cents to 5.4 cents. The higher schedule applicable to the higher grade of brick and clay products reflects some increases in the rates from longer distances, and decreases for the shorter distances. The lower schedule for common brick and concrete blocks is restricted to distances of 150 miles or less.

The new order supersedes a former order issued by the commission in the case of Wisconsin Clay Manufacturers Association vs. Ahnapee & Western Railway et al.

The reduction in rates should shorten the cost of building material and result in increased building operations, members of the commission say.

REPLEVIN FOR REHM LIQUOR

Eikhorst—Attorney Edward Racine, started a replevin suit to recall possession of the $25,000 Rehm liquor stock, which has been in possession of Sheriff Hal Wylie for some months past. Judge E. B. In the meantime the liquor is in the possession of the coroner, Frank M. Mayer.

FRENCH PAYMENTS DEPEND ENTIRELY ON REPARATIONS

od her internal debt in the last five years and insisted that the question of what France could pay America, indeed the question of when she could begin to reduce her internal debt, was entirely dependent upon what Germany would pay, and when.

Incidentally the French at this very moment have reached an impasse in handling their financial difficulties, which strikingly illustrates the general reparations situation and confirms the impression that a settlement can not be delayed beyond next fall.

Just Rule Money.

In Saturday's dispatch, for example, this correspondent outlined the assets and liabilities of France and then pointed out another three and a half billion dollars must be raised to finish the reconstruction of houses and factories in devastated areas. This already has been voted, and the French government now must find a way to develop necessary revenues. Shall it be by another internal loan? The answer is that the government offers to the investors or government loans to make them attractive already has reached six and a half percent. Will the French continue to buy bonds when nothing appears to be forthcoming from Germany?

Based on Payments.

It was at this point that Lassalle shrugged his shoulders characteristically and said:

"You have put your finger on the crux of the whole problem. The idea of the French financial system has been for five years predicated on the idea of Germany's paying something. The beginning of payments would therefore help the French out of a critical situation and that is why a reparations settlement, which included a loan by private bankers to the German government with which to pay France, would go a long way toward mollifying opinion here.

Race for Compromise.

The real question is how much of sacrifice must France make to get cash quickly. Her people would of course rather buy another issue of internal bonds than pay a large sum in cash, if that were possible. There is room for a compromise just now because there is in France at least the will to settle. Whatever France and Great Britain agree upon, Germany would be obliged to accept and probably will. France owes Great Britain three billion dollars and interest thereon would be due to Germany in paying America. The idea of England playing a lone hand in the situation is not taken as a serious threat because of the invitation it gives Germany to pay her obligations.

Germany Holds Key.

As for America's receiving interest or payments on the principal from France—a circumstance that would help reduce American income taxes considerably—the fact is that Germany holds the key to it all, no matter how much American officials may insist that there is no relationship between German reparations and allied debts to America.

The French concede that the British played a master stroke when they put through their debt settlement, but they inquire where Great Britain will ever get the money to pay America unless the Germans pay a substantial part of the cost of the war.

BUY COAL EARLY, SAYS TRAFFIC MAN

Railroads Will be Cluttered with Farm Products Soon, Warns Campbell.

"A word to the wise, get your coal for next winter early."

That is the warning sounded by J. M. Campbell, manager of the Mather-Cogswell corporation at the Chamber of Commerce, general traffic manager.

"The federal fuel distributor has issued a warning to local consumers that a heavy movement of general traffic will take place in the season may interfere with coal shipments," says Mr. Campbell. "In addition, the American Railway association has sent out an official statement to the effect that if coal consumers do not purchase coal in anticipation of fall and winter requirements they will experience difficulty in procuring it during the season when railroads are taxed with a heavy movement of general traffic, particularly of agricultural products."

Pleas of Curs Now.

The railway association points out that while the carriers are in shape to handle and move coal with reasonable promptness, provided the movement is distributed throughout the entire year, they are not prepared with surplus equipment and facilities sufficient to meet the full month's volume of consumers to buy coal during the summer months when sufficient transportation is available.

"The answer is—buy coal now and store to capacity consistent with safety."

At the same time, Mr. Campbell says that at the recommendation of the United States commission the Interstate commerce commission has started a special investigation into the reasonableness of the present freight rates on hard coal. This includes all railroads.

Had Wide Experience.

Mr. Campbell has been with the local office going back two months now. He has had 12 years of general traffic experience in practically every phase of the work, including rate adjustments, appearances before railroad rate committees, quoting rates, tracing cars, auditing freight and express bills, and handling claims.

In addition, he was traffic manager for the Blatchford-Campbell company, Waukesha, for two years. He was assistant traffic manager for the J. Case Threshing Machine company, Racine, for three and a half years.

Commenting upon the value of a traffic bureau, Mr. Campbell says his office has saved several hundred dollars for local concerns since his arrival. In one case, by being given instant information of a change in rate, a firm here was able to quote a cheaper price on its products.

PLOT FOR FREEDOM.

CAUSES FILIPINO-

STRIKE AT WOOD

conformity with the organic act

practically repeating word for word

the provisions of the Jones act.

The Plant Harvester.

But this authority had dead letter in the hands of the pliant Governor Harrison. He never exercised it, and said he did not intend to do so. In a few words, he told the Filipinos to run their own show, and they did so. He believed in independence, and sought to give the islands free rein even if congress did not by doing whatever the independence and the islands leaders decided, whether for good or bad. The whole machinery of the island government was put behind the independence movement, and the legislature voted large sums to keep an independence propaganda bureau in Washington.

Matters were carried even further when, in 1919, the Filipino legislature passed an act by adding to the reservation of powers over all departments to the governor general the significant words, "in matters of general policy."

Rebelting Governor.

This was a clear attempt on the part of the Philippine legislature to strip and change the power of the governor general, when no congress had that authority. But the then Governor Harrison, who heartily favored taking all power away from the governor general, approved it.

The governor's course, it can be said, did not meet with the approval of either Secretary of War Garrison or later Secretary of War Baker, who thought he was going to far.

He succeeded in his purpose by not exercising his authority and by surrendering them to the cabinet, made up of island political leaders.

In bad mess.

Things were in a pretty bad mess when Governor General Harrison gave up the job. The islands were hit hard by the depression, and the islands' finances were tampered with, the islands, having had a taste of one figurehead governor general, pliant to the every wish of the independence leaders, did not relish the thought of change. Whether the course pursued by the Harding administration in meeting the difficult crisis was a wise one is open to question.

One commission headed by former Governor General Cameron Forbes and Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood was sent to the islands to investigate conditions and report to the President. It perhaps would have worked out better just to have sent the new governor general, Wood, himself, it turned out to be, to take hold of the situation without more delay.

The independence leaders did not think for a moment the commission would recommend immediate independence and when the report finally was made recommending that the islands were not yet ready for this step it was met, naturally, with the outcry from the independence leaders that the islands had been "buccoed" and the commission had been sent over to find just this thing.

"We're like it."

Despite the opposition of the independence politicians to him, Governor Wood's appointment was well received in the islands. He had a reputation as being a big man and a capable administrator, and the islands generally were somewhat tickled to find an individual of such ability and魄力来头 to be the new chief. He went rather well at first, although it was a most difficult situation the governor general had to tackle. But he plunged into it, determined to get tangled finances and other island affairs in ship-shape again. All General Wood had to do was let himself be a pliant figurehead governor general and let the independence leaders continue to let the independence political leaders exercise all real authority in the islands, and everything then would have continued lovely.

But that he would not do. Under the Jones act, he was responsible for supervision of all departments, and that responsibility he did not shirk.

As Harrison had done, Wood utilized the administrative functions of the legislature, and in the last session exercised his power of veto on several measures he believed ill-conceived.

Conflicting views over the management of the national bank, the handling of the railways and other matters widened the breach. It was inevitable that it should come, for the island leaders would have been satisfied with nothing short of running things completely themselves as they had done under Harrison and not with too great success.

Wood's Authority.

Officials of the insular affairs bureau have advised Secretary of War Weeks that the organic law of the islands gave General Wood complete authority to do what he did, and that his course did not constitute usurpation, as charged, in the slightest degree.

General Weeks has asked for complete statements from everybody concerned. Besides letting it be known that upon the statement of facts to date no usurpation has been shown against Wood, and that the only course open to him is either to stand by Wood completely or remove him, he is setting aside his original decision.

Quarantine laws of the Independence party will soon be in the United States to press his outcry against Wood. The whole matter will then go before Harding for decision.

And unless Washington has missed its guess, General Wood will be sustained in every respect.

Imported Disease

Kills Off Natives

[By ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, D. C. — An announcement that the influenza is ravaging the natives of the western coast of Alaska is the latest news from the Orient. It reveals that one kind of tragedy has always followed the advance of civilization," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "Primitive people in out-of-the-way places, once entirely isolated from civilization, have been threatened by disease, once entirely isolated from the rest of the world, who have come to play. Fishing has been better, at the lakes in this section than for a long time. Good catches are reported from Turtle Lake especially."

Tourist automobile traffic was at its height Sunday when a procession of 150 cars, through the streets of Janesville, came from every direction. Hundreds of tourists from Illinois and adjacent states have been making Southern Wisconsin tours this year in preference to going farther north. The lakes and scenes around this part of the state have called more tourists than ever for the tourist who has come to play. Fishing has been better, at the lakes in this section than for a long time. Good catches are reported from Turtle Lake especially.

CIRCUS CARRIES OWN DETECTIVES

But Here and There an Amateur Crook Gets Along, Chief Worms.

Warning that circus followers would invade Janesville, Tuesday, with the showing of Ringling Bros and Barnum and Bailey's shows, was made Monday by Chief of Police Charles Newman. Local residents were warned to lock their doors securely before leaving homes.

"Although the great majority of circus and highly reputable Chief Newman said, 'there are' others undesirable followers, not connected with the show, who commit petty thefts. Expert confidence-men and pick-pockets also usually follow circuses so that if precautions are taken, the usual number of thefts will be reduced.'

Seal of the night force will be on duty at the fair grounds Tuesday afternoon to assist in the handling of the huge crowds that are expected to attend the event. A large force of officers will also be stationed on the grounds during the evening performances. With the doing away with the annual morning parade by circus authorities, traffic difficulties on the streets are expected to be reduced to the minimum.

The Ringling show carries its own force of detectives and only the amateurs have the nerve to get near the crew of sleuths, the old timers fighting shy.

Officers, head of the detective staff of the show, says that the police used to gather the crowds and the pickpockets worked among them. Now that the parade has been cut there is less opportunity. "There was a time when crooks of all sorts went with the circus and were a part of the travelling crowd. Burnam was a good example of an organized detective force and clean and strict the Ringlings have come into the field they have made this part of the show organization so powerful that the 'dip' and the short change artist speak, would just the state, was silent as the old Indian graves at Kenosha.

If I could have entertained the slightest apprehension that the Constitution framed by the convention where I had the honor to preside might possibly endanger the religious rights of any ecclesiastical society, certainly I would never have placed my signature to it; and if I could now conceive that the general government might ever be so administered as to render the liberty of conscience insecure, I beg you will be persuaded that no one would be more zealous than myself to establish effectual barriers against the horrors of spiritual tyranny and every species of religious persecution.—GEORGE WASHINGTON.

Pancho Villa, Useless to Humanity.

Pancho Villa will not be missed by the peons of Mexico. One of them himself, he fought in the name of revolution but only to pillage, rob, murder and retaliate in revenge. He was ignorant, wickedly shrewd, daring at times, cowardly at others, the perfect type of the brute with power. His death is fitting and according to the rules. "They who live by the sword shall perish by the sword." Villa had a great opportunity. His peon followers in Mexico were slaves, serfs and tollers, a legacy from the old Spanish regime. For them he planned nothing. He did not help them rise above their state, had no idea of education, took them no step out of the miasma of ignorance and superstition, and did nothing to relieve them from the chains of a bondage in which they were shackled mentally and physically. Villa led a life of bloody piracy. That was all. He had no idea of stable government and cared for none. He left a thousand revenges to be satisfied and finally died because of feuds. There is nothing heroic, nothing romantic, about this brute and his name will be recorded with other murderers and thieves in the final account.

Why Ford Has a Following.

The Worcester, Mass., Telegram, says it is quite possible that Henry Ford might be president since a number of persons in the United States think him "extremely smart." There are thousands of people that think with Henry that "history is bunk" and know as much about Benedict Arnold as does Ford when he said he thought the greatest of traitors was "some kind of a writer." John Burroughs, the naturalist, who was a friend of Ford's has said of a conversation with Ford:

"One day I was telling Ford what a great book the Bible was—what noble literature; and he said 'I haven't read it much, but I tell you what I think; Emerson's books and Thoreau's and yours will be read after the Bible is forgotten.'

There are millions of people who never heard of Thoreau and about as many more who think Emerson was the inventor of a shoe or a famous negro minstrel if they are old enough to remember.

The summing up of the reason why Ford may be president is that the public is of the opinion that Ford has been able to make and distribute more money than any other living man.

The national quality for the appreciation of such achievement, even to the exclusion of recognition for worthier things, may explain why bricklayers fare better than college professors, why jazz predominates, why the South never votes otherwise than Democratic, why we pack the movie temples and why even Mr. Ford's elevation to the presidency would represent little more than our just deserts.

Mr. McAdoo: "Yes, I am not a candidate for president."

Death Rides at Crossings.

Death comes each day at the railroad crossing and the aggregate toll is something more even than that of the railroads and mines. Short consideration was given to the attempt to make railroads arterial highways and hault each car at a crossing. We are so much in nervous hurry these days that the very thought that one must halt a car at a railroad track for a moment, was anathema. We have been killing on the average of forty persons each Sunday—the Lord's Day being the most prolific in tragedies of automobile.

Some of the deaths are due to bootleg whiskey and when they happen from that cause, it is too much to call them "accidents," rather are they inevitable. There are more careful drivers than ever, but one driver who has neither care for himself nor for others will make for more disaster than all the watchful ones. The combination of care-taking drivers against this road fiend will some day effectively squelch him and his long list of murders will be curtailed.

WHAT MINERS MAKE AND SPEND

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN

Washington—There have been conflicting statements and reports about the earnings of coal miners and what it costs them to live and maintain their families, and so little dependable data on the subject that the cost of living and wage sections of the anthracite report of the United States Coal commission will be read with unusual interest.

The findings of the commission in these matters will be regarded as reliable, if it is to be assumed that the commission has made its investigation thoroughly and carefully and was able to get exactly the information it wanted. High prices for coal have been represented by operators as due to unduly high wages paid miners, while the latter have asserted their actual earnings were inadequate to cover the cost of living.

First of all, it is the conclusion of the commission that the anthracite miner is fairly well paid and suffers no hardships incident to an inadequate wage. On the other hand it finds that the miners' helpers or laborers are underpaid. "The domestic life of the mining population has of course all the lights and shadows of any large number of families," says the commission. "It is no longer submerged or exploited population, whatever may have been true of the period before 1900, when the series of wage increases began. The earnings of full time workers certainly permit the essentials of a reasonable standard of living. Those who take full advantage of their opportunities to earn in the various occupations connected with the industry and are not handicapped by serious misfortune need not suffer for shelter, food, clothing, or other necessities and comforts of life, even without the supplementary earnings of wife or children. On the other hand many of the families of miners' helpers or laborers have a very uncertain and inadequate income. These families, often large, are frequently in economic distress."

The commission does not hesitate to say that wages of these laborers should be increased and points out that they are the only ones who can get the experience and training to become certificated miners. Some adjustment of wages and of the terms of employment which will bring larger and more assured incomes to these helpers is urged as the first step necessary toward increasing their numbers and their efficiency.

To measure wages against cost of living an investigation was made of the principal items of expense in mine workers' families. A list of food supplies actually purchased during six months last winter by 550 families was obtained from storekeepers' records and then the actual budgets of 712 families were examined and analyzed.

In this way the commission found that families with incomes of less than $100 per month spent an average of $65.82 per month for their living, paid debts amounting to $14.45 and put one dollar in the bank. Of the living expenses the average for rent was $13.24 and for food, clothing, personal supplies and upkeep of household equipment, $40.55. For recreation the monthly item was $8.04, for church contributions, $1.98, and for labor organizations, $1.44. There were 56 of those families.

Families with incomes of from $100 to $150 per month, and there were 225 of these out of the 712, spent an average of $120.34 a month, the main item being $31.51 for rent, $80.93 for food, clothing, etc., and $15.58 for debts. Seventeen of these families reported bank deposits averaging $12.05.

In the next group, those with incomes of from $150 to $200, there were 236 families, the average monthly disbursement being $165.10. The rental item remains constant, while the amount expended for food and clothing shows an increase to $15.40. Twenty-eight of these families were putting money in bank at the rate of $20.18 per month.

For the families with incomes of more than $200, 185 in all, the rental item shows a slight increase to $14.60, while the expenditure for food and clothing amounted to $14.67 and the total expenditures are $247.79. Monthly bank deposits amounting to $26.20 were reported by 33 of these families.

The average income from all sources was approximately $176 per month; 41 per cent had as much as this or more; 59 per cent had less. In 33 per cent of the families the head of the family was a contract miner; in 34 per cent he was a company miner or a skilled or semi-skilled day worker; in 33 per cent he was classed as a laborer. The proportions are substantially the same as they are in the whole body of mine workers, so the families may be said to be truly representative.

It is interesting to note that the prevailing household was one of six members—usually four children with the father and mother. In most economic computations the average family is held to be one of five members, two adults and three children, but these miners have a higher average.

In securing the data from the operators as to the earnings of the miners the commission required payrolls for the entire year of 1921 and has tabulated the returns for 64,279 contract and consideration miners, 76,018 miners' laborers and 46,678 outside men.

Of the first group more than 33,000 worked 138 days or less during the year and had total incomes of less than $1,000; about 7,600 worked 217 days or less and had incomes ranging from $1,000 to $1,500; 11,100 worked from 231 to 254 days and earned from $1,500 to $2,000; 10,800 made practically full time, which was 271 days for the year, and had earnings of between $2,000 and $3,000, while 1,300 earned from $3,000 to $4,000 and 168 over $4,000. It is to be noted that almost 20,000 of the miners who worked practically full time, or from 231 to 271 days had incomes of from $1,500 to $2,500, which gives the range of the earnings of the better class and more industrious.

Of the second group, the miners' laborers or helpers, 68,800 of the 76,000 worked less than 167 days and had incomes under $1,000 for the year. The earnings of 5,000 ranged from $1,000 to $1,500, with a maximum of 252 days. Approximately 1,800 earned up to $3,000 and 246 had incomes between that figure and $3,000.

In the third group, the men who work outside the mines, about half of the 46,678 had incomes of less than $2,000, with a maximum of 228 days work. Some 12,000 of them earned from $1,000 to $1,500 and about 9,000 from $1, revolutionists from Soviet Russia who have sought by means of deception to destroy the organizations which labor has set up for its own protection." Senator Brookhart comes back here and declares with loud voice that Soviet Russia is the second greatest nation in the world. It is not possible that Mr. Gompers would include the senator among the "hordes of invaders."

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE SPEECH OF BOYHOOD
Oh, I don't know how to say it, but the heart of me is glad Whenever I can wander with a happy little lad,
And can listen to his chatter
Of the things which really matter:

The birds that nest above us and the clover-scented breeze,
And the white clouds drifting by
On the perfect sea of sky,
And the difference in people and the difference in trees.

Oh, I know that I grow weary of the talk of busy men;
Of the fame and fortune waiting in the books
Which they shall pen,
Of the strife for conquests sordid
And the money to be hoarded,
Of the failures they have suffered and the victories they've won;
But I like to see the glisten
Of young eyes, the smile of a lassie
To whom I can whisper the speech of glad amazement at the wonders
A man has done.

Man must work and dream and suffer and must bend his back to care,
And a grown-up's speech is freighted with the burden he must bear,
But a child, uncalled by duty,
Sees the glory and the beauty
At the feet:
For a boy can still discover
In the mystery of clover
Something Age has lost forever in the tumult of the street.

Oh, I don't know how to say it, but it's good for me to hear
The eager conversation of a glad boy walking near.

For I learn in spite of sorrow
There are smiles for each tomorrow.
There are eyes to which the wonders of the world are ever new;

And by his rich voice I'm taken
Back to splendors I've forsaken—
To the things which really matter and the last ing joys and true.

Who's Who Today

MAGNUS JOHNSON

The recent election to the senate of Magnus Johnson, two-fifths strong-lunged farmer of Kimball, Minn., goes down not only as one of the biggest political jolts of recent years, but as one of the most interesting happenings in the political world of recent months.

Johnson's opponents referred repeatedly to his loud voice and the fact that he was a "tough" fighter.

Young persons in their early teens receive and should have as much food, if not more, than their sedentary parents require. The phenomenal appetite of the growing boy, or girl, is physiological and normal and should not be curbed. Any regular boy should eat as much as his father, even more if his father is a light chap.

The senior-elect was born in Värmland, Sweden, in 1871. After trying the glass trade a while he heard the call of the sea and sailed before the mast. His father is a well-known ship owner in his homeland.

The young man came to the United States when he was a mill hand and lumber jack. He had taken a leading part in the Farmer-Labor party's activities in his state the last three or four years.

The Riddle of the Spinning Wheel

By M. E. and T. W. HANSHEW
Being an Exploit in the Career of Hamilton Cleek, Detective

Copyright, 1922, by Doubleday, Page & Co., and published by arrangement with McClure Newspaper Syndicate of New York City.

SYNOPSIS. In deadly fear of the lives of her father and others in the Duggan home at Ayton castle, Maude Duggan seeks help from Scotland Yard. Hamilton Cleek, the famous detective, takes up the attempt to solve the mystery of the Spinning Wheel, which on occasions and without the aid of human hands runs away. He finds about a death follows. The head of the house is the old tricelle Sir Andrew Duggan, his son by a first wife, the daughter and a second wife—a French woman. Sir Andrew's son, Cyril, believed that the wife is plotting for the death of all in order that her son may be the heir of the estates. Cleek starts his investigation and finds another secret existence and finds that Ross, the eldest son, is an electrical expert. He has made his father angry by lighting the house with incendiary devices. It is believed that the second wife is attempting to have Ross disinherited and her own son, Cyril, make the heir. At a late hour, however, the elder Ross is slain while seated in his chair in a moment when the lights go out. Maude Duggan tells Cleek, (Deland) about it.

Then there was another point to be taken up, the question of Captain Macdonald's presence in these grounds last night, shortly after the murder had taken place. That murderer must account for his movements in the property now. And if by any chance there were footprints outside that very window, then—bang! he, too, might be included in the circle of possible criminals.

He strode quickly over to the window and leaned out of it, looking down upon the lawn below, where a number of footprints of three feet or so and the little walled-in courtyard that girt it about. Eh? what? There were marks in the soft earth, and plenty of 'em!

Then the assembled company fairly gasped at his next action, while Mr. Narkomoff knew him better than they did. He leaped out of the window and leaned out of it. Mr. Cleek had climbed upon the ledge and had let himself down—light as a cat—down on to the bed, and stood looking in through the window at them with serenely smiling face. "Gad!" he ejaculated suddenly. "Well, and why not? Youthful constable just now along into the village and fetch me back Captain Angus Macdonald. I want to speak to him rather particularly. Tell him it's the Law—and that he's got to come—and he'll come along pretty lively, I can promise you."

The constable slipped along forthwith, while a sudden Maude Duggan's flushed face went white as a dead face, and her eyes fairly blazed at him. "Captain Macdonald! Oh, it's ridiculous, Mr. Deland!—absurd! What on earth are you dragging him in for? You must be mad to think of it for one moment!"

Cleek took up a拳ing hand before he dropped to the ground and began peering at the footprints in the soft earth through a magnifying glass.

"I don't think, Miss Duggan—it's a policeman's business to know," he retorted, and then set about his task. While those in the fair room crowded about the open window and stood looking down at him with blank, unhappy faces.

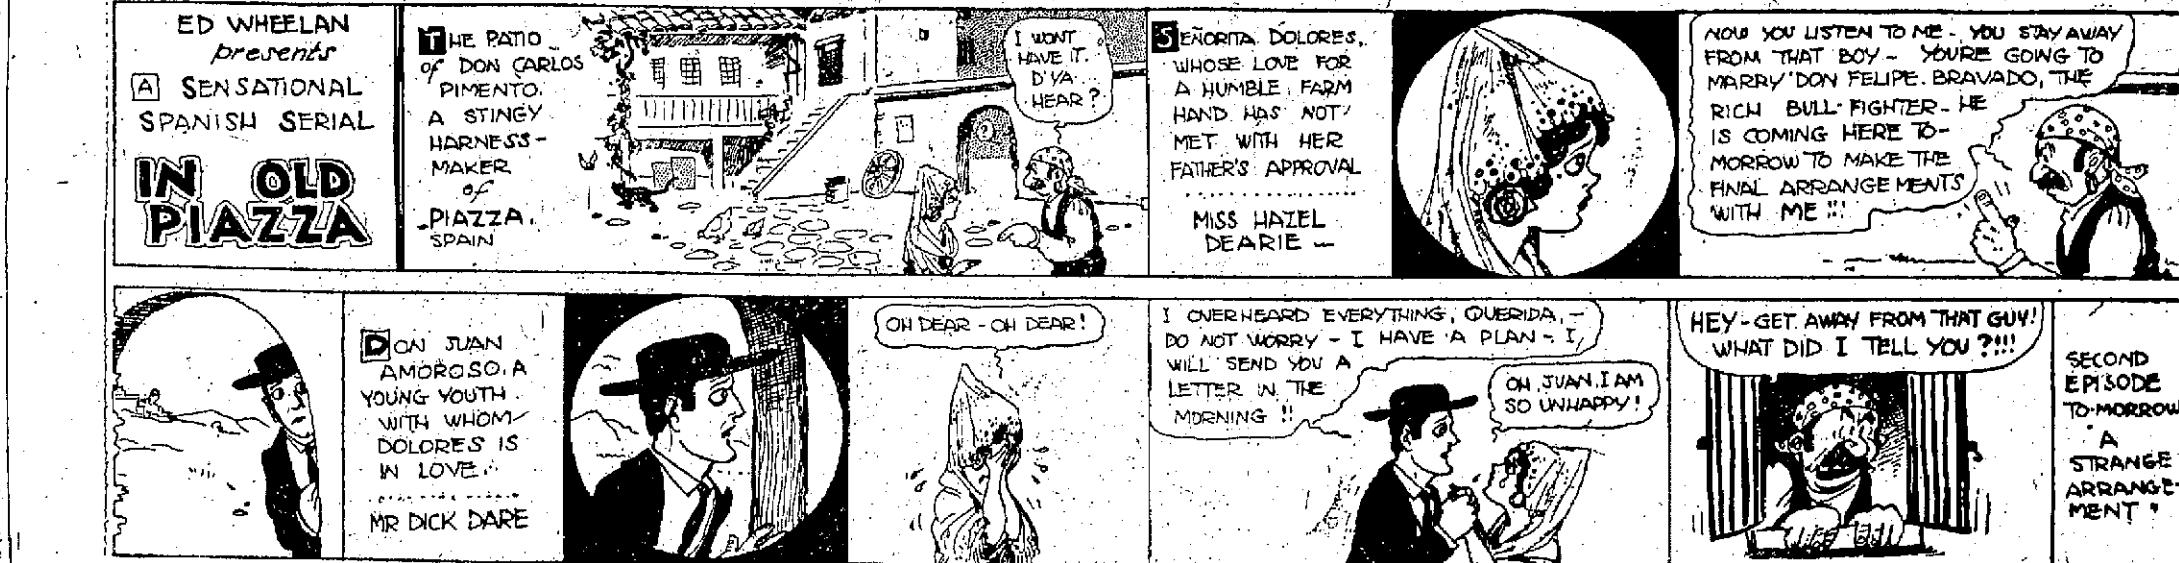

Carefully he measured their length with his little foot-stool and noted the size down in his pocketbook. Then he fitted one of his own thin feet into the footprint in the fair room, crowded about the open window and stood looking down at him with blank, unhappy faces.

"A half-sized boot, ladies and gentlemen," he remarked; "quite a full-sized boot. Number tens. If I know the truth, it's a lady's boot like hunting-boots, too. Evidently a chap who rides. Now, this Captain Macdonald, Lady Paula—"

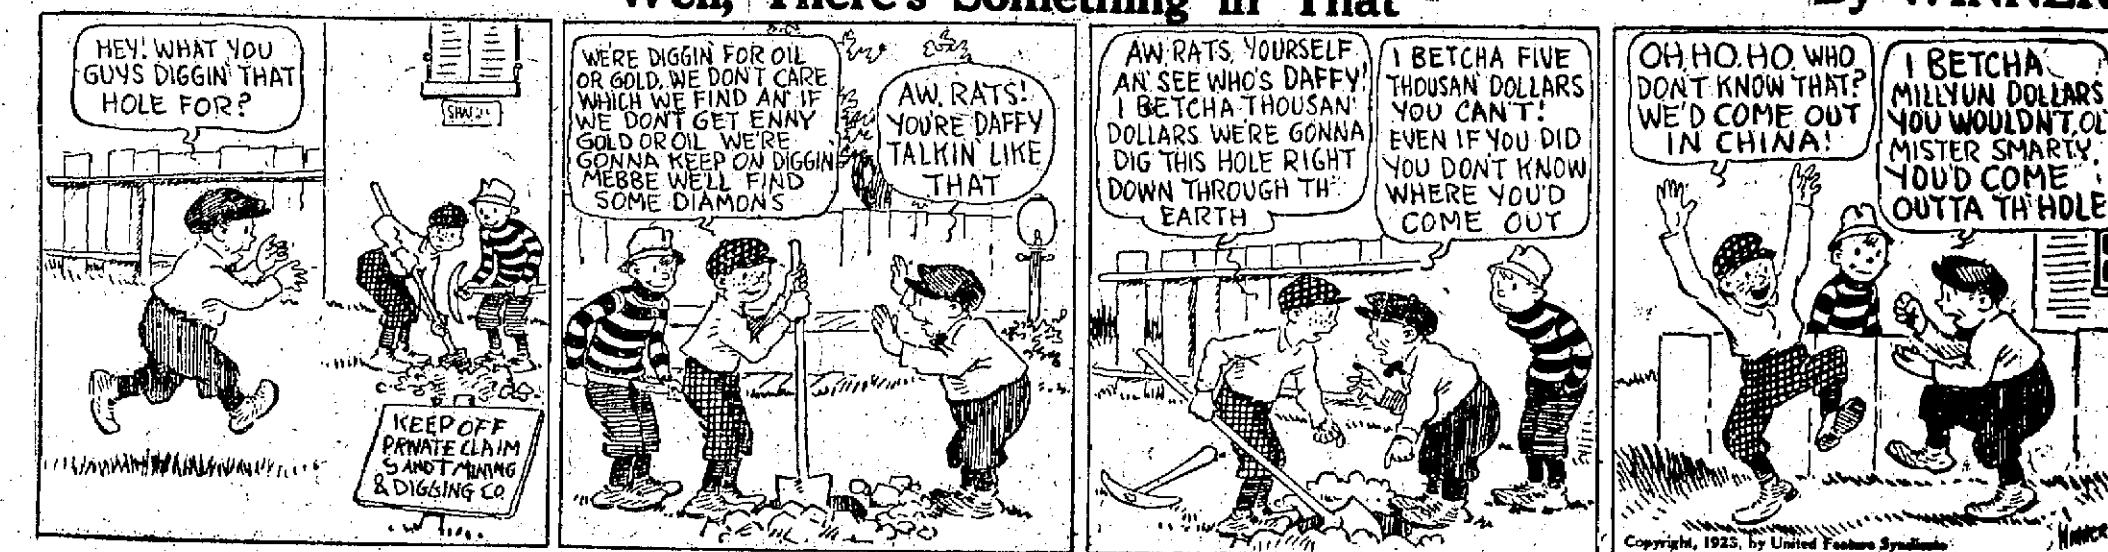

"One of the finest horsemen in the country," she returned, with a shrugging of shoulders and an upturning of brows.

"Ah, yes, so. That was what I imagined when I saw him when I encountered him here in these grounds

Stuffed Bermuda Onions—Peel very large Bermuda onions and soak in cold water for 10 minutes. Pare, cut in half, drain, and cut out the centers. Chop the centers with a little salt pork or bacon and add enough bread crumbs to make the required amount of stuffing. Season with salt, pepper and mace, and add one well beaten egg. Add enough milk to make a smooth paste, stuff the onions, and put into a baking dish with bacon, with lemon juice, bring to the boiling point, pour over the onions and serve.

Breaded Veal Chops—Wipe chops with a wet cloth, dry. Make a dressing of bread crumbs, onion, butter, sage, salt and pepper to taste. Moisten with egg, spread on chops and bake.

Scalloped Potatoes—Raw or cooked potatoes can be used in this dish. In this menu enough potatoes can be baked for lunch to scallop for dinner, and slice them, put in buttered baking dish and pour over them a thin white sauce. Sprinkle bread crumbs on top and bake with chops.

Heart and Home Problems

BY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.
Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I met a young man a few months ago, and went out with him several times to dances and riding. I could tell he liked me because he planned more dates to go dancing with me when we were weather and—well, he wished I didn't work during the day so that he could see me often. He promised he would call me up when he had time. He is quite busy taking some special work and so I was surprised when he did not telephone me.

Now I have learned that he is going with another girl and I cannot understand why he is going with her instead of me. Do you know someone told him something which was not true about me? DOUBTFUL.

It is probable that the young man met the other girl and because she was some one new enjoyed going with her more than with you. Some people are very fickle and you cannot count on them as friends for any length of time. I hardly believe your friend heard anything to prejudice him against you.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 19 and have been going with a young man for a year and a half. I think very much of him. I suppose he does not show it at times, but if he cares for me he is not the kind to show it. We have spoken of marriage, but he says his mother can't spare him, although he is not the only one at home. He is not what you consider the blot, and therefore I cannot judge whether or not he is influenced by it.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: He is merely kind to your daughter, but places with him, therefore it seems to me advisable to say that you are hurt because he keeps coming to your home but never takes you anywhere. It is not fair for a man to accept a girl's hospitality all the time. He should do his share by inviting her to places. It need not injure your pride to say that you do not think he is doing the right thing, someone ought to awaken him to the fact.

The difference in your ages is a serious matter, and I think you ought to have younger friends even if they do seem silly to you. The day is coming when the silly boys will grow up and they will be just as interesting and many as older ones. By the time you are old enough to marry the young men of your age will be more desirable than a man who is reaching an age when he will no longer enjoy the pleasures of youth. It seems to me he has a good start in that direction already since he is so willing to stay at home all the time and never take you to amusements.

Consider the blot, and therefore I cannot judge whether or not he is influenced by it.

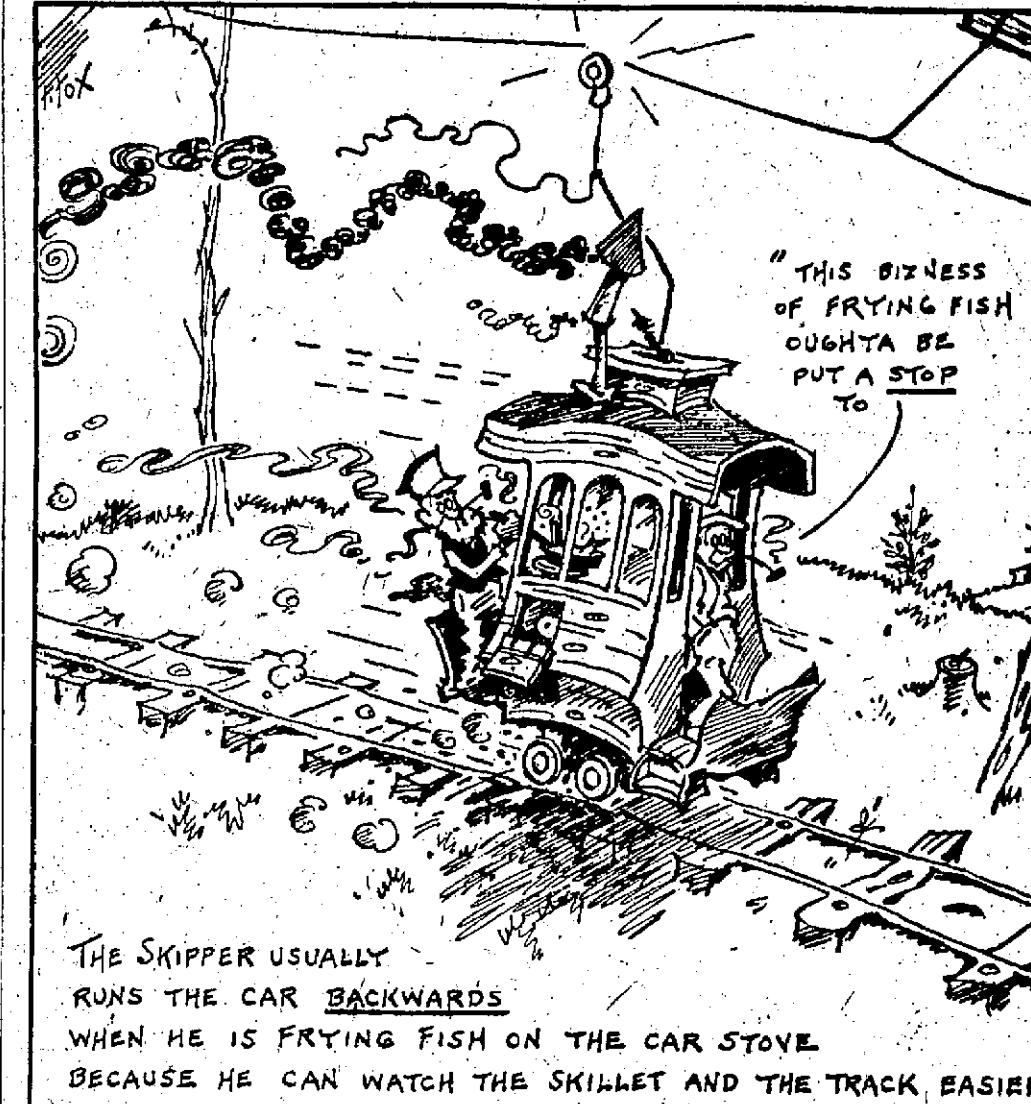

Dear Mrs. Thompson: He is merely kind to your daughter, but places with him, therefore it seems to me advisable to say that you are hurt because he keeps coming to your home but never takes you anywhere. It need not injure your pride to say that you do not think he is doing the right thing, someone ought to awaken him to the fact.

SOMEONE IN DOUBT: In order for me to solve a problem, it is necessary to tell the particulars. You have so successfully solved your affair that I cannot answer all of your questions.

You have hinted that the man may not take you places because of something wrong with your family, but you have not mentioned what you

Beauty Chats by Edna Kent Forbes

THE OUTDOOR GIRL

Good health is one of the so-called "secrets" of popularity, nowadays at least. There was a time when the dewy-eyed heroine was the ideal of beauty, but the girl who adored the outdoors was considered a trifle vulgar. Alas! this according to the novels, and it must have been so for even bad fiction is a fair reflection of the contemporary state of society. Perhaps men in those days had greater strength and nervous force than they have now. Perhaps the reason they undoubtedly preferred fresh air and outdoor exercise today is because they themselves haven't so much strength and sympathy to give. I don't know; these are vague ideas and theories of mine. I do know, and you yourself will see that it's true if you think about it, that the healthy girl radiates energy and vitality, and you feel it immediately when you are around her.

The healthy girl is the one who should deliberately cultivate good health. I do not say that being an "outdoor girl" will bring you that blessing. I only say that it will go a long way toward doing so. Few of us are outdoors as much as we can be, and many of us are not. If you can't get outside as in the house this time of the year, it's easy to make a temporary outdoor kitchen on a porch to do most of the work. It's as easy to sleep with the windows wide open as partly open. It's easy to play tennis, even croquet, golf or croquet are healthy, and adaptable to the small lawn.

You can think of many ways to spend extra hours, either of work or play out of doors. Try it, for this is the golden time of the year. In the winter you will feel the benefits and be glad of every minute of it. Sunburn and freckles will fade out, you know, but the gain in health and good looks will be lasting.

ETHEL MAY—Rub the elbows thoroughly with olive oil or cream. Scrub them with hot water and a moderately stiff complexion brush and a good hours out in the open, especially if she is interested in tennis or any of the other health-building sports.

Hopie F. D.—Massage from the forehead, around the eyes and under the nose; then from the chin upward and out over the cheek to the ear.

Dinner Stories

Many stories are told of the late Maurice Barrymore, father of the distinguished trio of actors who belong to this stage generation, says Judge St. George Flavelle, in his weekly column, and his wife was a social animal. Once, he encountered an author of stage pieces who was at the time furnishing the Casino with much of its material, and who was grieving over something that had happened to him. "Why so glum?" asked Barrymore.

"Glam" doesn't express my feelings, Barrymore said. Last night my little boy, Maurice, was running around the house, and I had just finished a story. "I'm sorry," he said, "but I have no copy of it."

"Oliver had," responded Barrymore.

"What do you mean by 'Oliver had'?"

"Why, I didn't know the kid could read."

Laura liked to play hooky, but had difficulty in getting away with it because every time she was absent from school the teacher sent a note to her mother. So one day she decided to try it, if she could not circumvent this embarrassing procedure.

From a pay station she got the teacher on the wire, and disguised her voice as well as she was able,

and said, "Mrs. [redacted] were wonderful."

LATEST MARKET REPORT

Weekly Livestock Review.

Chicago.—A week ago steers and heifers sold at the high point of the year. This attracted many breeders and much stock, with a result that last week, practically all steers took noticeables drops, and the price was down 25¢ to $1 lower than closing prices of the previous week. Strictly finished steers were scarce and brought good prices. Prices had ticked up again, however, and were still only 25¢ lower than they had been, while others suffered losses up to $1. Under the pressure of nearly 450,000 cattle offered at Chicago alone during the past two weeks, together with enormous supplies at all leading centers, values have been held down sharply, and after best had reached the $8 mark, prices since second day ruled downward until the week-end, when a scarcity again made the market firm.

The bad slump in sheep last week was not because of the liberal receipts—70,000, as compared with 73,000 the week before—but because there was an heavy supply of mutton at eastern points and a demoralized trade.

The worst break of the season was recorded in the lamb market last week when the general level of prices was let down $1.50. The supply was not so excessive, but there was a lack of satisfactory market points, and a determination of workers to reduce the market to a better working level.

Chicago Review.

Chicago.—Although wheat started lower in price Monday, the market was firm, and the market was steady.

Heavy receipts of newly harvested wheat here, estimated at 1,000 carloads, were chiefly responsible for the initial downturn in values.

On the other hand, the public market in the wheat and reports of crop damage by black rust, together with scarceness of offerings in the southwest, gave a subsequent advance to the market.

On the other hand, the market was met with a general price increase, which ranged from 14@14@15c lower, with Sept. 98@99c, and Dec. $1.01@1.02, were followed by upturns to 14@14@15c.

Finance.

Wall Street Review.

New York.—The market showed some improvement toward mid-day under the leadership of rails. The lower rate for money reflected the reduction in brokered loans disclosed in the market, but the market was still quite unwilling to sell near the inside prices. Buyers held off as much as possible in the hope that a lower market would follow.

Concentrating their attack on the oil market, the operators of the market scored a material advance all around.

In the later dealings the market eased, due to welcome news over the issuance of a new loan. The close was settled at $1.00 net lower to 14@14@15c.

ELKHORN

MRS. GHANT HARRINGTON.
Elkhorn—Mrs. Edith Webb entertained 25 friends and neighbors Saturday, to meet Mrs. Agnes Merrick-Jones, who is visiting relatives here and Springfield, her girlhood home. Mrs. Webb celebrated her 60th birthday anniversary Saturday and had this surprise for her guests. The hostess was prepared by the hostess.

Loring Corner Store

The program for the laying of the cornerstone of the new Methodist church, Sunday, July 29, is being prepared. The Holton-Elkhorn band has been engaged by the Rev. T. Parker Hiltzourne, and he is arranging for the attendance of a good speaker.

The house where she had another old resident at 2:30 p.m. Monday when funeral services for Mrs. E. Dumuth were held at the Congregational church. The Rev. A. B. Bell officiated, and A. F. Dasing, B. B. Kraus, R. G. Hoffman, T. A. Walbrandt, Oliver Anne, and John Tyner, the latter of Elgin, were the pallbearers. The vocal selections of the dead were rendered on the organ by Miss Mabel Ferrell, and Almas Holmes and Vaughn rendered vocal selections. Elida Kramer was born in Scotland, Schenectady county, New York, in 1845, and at the age of 11 years she came to Eagle, Wis., with her parents, John and Eliza Kramer. She was married to Mr. John Damuth in 1864, to whom Damuth, an old widower, and lived in Fort Atkinson several years, where three daughters were born. The family moved to Elkhorn in 1877 and has since resided here. Mr. Damuth died in 1889. Mrs. Damuth and her younger daughter, Lucille, lived together, and she was happy in her new home on Broad street, recently purchased by her son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. John Damuth, the last of a large family of brothers and sisters. She is survived by three daughters, and two grandchildren, who were present at the funeral. Large delegations from the W. R. C. and W. C. T. U. were also in attendance.

A Bit of Old History

Mrs. Anna Arnold Goodell, who has been writing her half-sister, Mrs. Emma Shatto-Kiff, talks very interestingly about early days in Elkhorn. Although 84 years of age, she goes from her home in Hebron, Ill., to St. Petersburg, Fla., every winter. Town talk centered around the removal of the old landmark, now known as the Marsh house, corner of Wisconsin and East street, and upon concluding the sale it was found that Mr. Goodell gave the correct ownership. The land was deeded to Mr. Grand Rockwell Sr., in 1844 from Levi Lee, who procured it the year previous from the board of supervisors of Walworth county in part payment for the erection of the first court house building. A bachelor carpenter (Van Brunt) built the house but never occupied it. It was the first residence of the grandparents of Mrs. Ruth B. Ramos, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Mallory. Mr. and Mrs. Mallory were the parents of four daughters, who married and settled in this vicinity, all of whom are now dead. Tenants occupied the place until Mr. Rockwell sold it to Solomon Hicks in 1856. The Barnes family came into possession of it in 1860, when it was deeded to Marion E. Stone. It was purchased by the Marsh family in 1902, and now the house has been recently purchased by P. H. Garvin from Will G. White, who has moved to Milwaukee.

DECLINES COMMENT ON MARION STATUS

Christian Missionary Society Representative Preaches Here Sunday:

The Rev. Jesse M. Bader, St. Louis, who visited the First Christian church here Sunday as a representative of the United Christian Missionary Society, declined to comment on the question concerning the Rev. Leeland L. Marion and his present status as a minister. He stated, however, that the "group evangelism" organization, which is said to have an interest in the Whiting, Ind.

church, of which Marion is now pastor, is an independent enterprise, having no connection with the national board represented by the Rev. Mr. Bader. This board, he said, has no authority over any local church minister and acts in an advisory capacity only when requested to do so.

PRAISES GILLILAND

Speaking from the pulpit Sunday morning, the visiting church leader announced that the United Christian Missionary Society has a deep interest in the work of the church here and stands ready to give such assistance and counsel as may be needed at the present time. Following a meeting of the official board at the close of the morning service, church officers said the Rev. Mr. Bader had spoken in highest terms concerning the Rev. E. A. Gilliland, to whom a call has been extended by the local church. Other available ministers will be recommended for the consideration of the church, should Mr. Gilliland decide not to come here.

Faithfulness Urged

In his sermon, Mr. Bader said: "Jesus is here in the church, we can't keep Him out. But we can't keep Him in the church unless we keep Him in the center of our lives. No matter how faithless others may be, we must always be faithful. The more faithless other people are, the greater need there is that we shall be faithful. What is it the church forefathers is there. This doesn't mean condoning wrong doing, but no matter what anybody does to us, it will make us smaller if we hate."

The Rev. Mr. Bader preached in the Beloit Christian church Sunday night. He was a dinner guest of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Allen, 1815 North Street. Mrs. Allen is a member of the board of managers of the United Christian Missionary society.

BANKER OF MILTON DIES SUDDENLY

Heart Trouble Is Fatal to Byron Wells, Prominent in Village.

Milton — Byron H. Wells, 66, president of the Bank of Milton, treasurer of the Milton and Milton Junction Telephone company and one of the most prominent and influential citizens of the village, died at 3 a.m. Monday. Heart disease caused his death.

Mr. Wells had been about town Sunday apparently feeling well and retired as usual. He died while asleep.

Byron Wells was born in Milton township, March 24, 1857, the son of Caleb and Martha Wells, who came here from New York state and settled on a farm. His father was an influential citizen and died in 1903 at the age of 75. His mother lived away at 1856 until 70. Mrs. Wells educated in the district schools, attended Milton college, then turned to farming which he followed until moving to Milton.

He was a republican and held almost every public office in the village, being village trustee, president of the village board and assessor. He was cashier of the Bank of Milton for 12 years and in 1914 became P. V. Green as president. He helped organize the Milton and Milton Junction Telephone company 22 years ago. Has since been its treasurer and member of the board of directors. He was a member of the Milton Odd Fellows, and was once grand at one time.

In 1890, Miss Marguerite Coon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Coon, became the wife of William H. Wells and they have three children: Helen, Palmyra, N. Y.; Clare, Ladysmith, and Kenneth, at home.

Funeral services probably will be held at the home Wednesday afternoon, with the Rev. H. N. Jordan officiating. Burial will be in the Milton cemetery. The daughter, Helen, is enroute from New York.

"Well, it won't hurt to put in a call now. If we never start we'll never get the number." — Louisville Courier-Journal.

WOMAN DIES UNDER AUTO; FOUR INJURED

Kenosha—Mrs. Blanche Maus, 35, wife of W. J. Maus, 1640 North Park Side avenue, Chicago, was killed, and four other people were seriously injured when a automobile driven by John Laufer of Chicago turned over on the Geneva road, 12 miles west of Kenosha, Sunday night. Mrs. Maus' skull was fractured.

Her husband was riding in another car and aided in taking his wife from the debris of the wreck.

Laufer said the accident was caused by the breaking of a steering wheel. The Chicago people had been celebrating the birthday of Mr. Maus with a week end fishing trip at one of the lakes in Kenosha county.
